

Kay and I have always had a special bond. I remember it vividly that one day, he offered me a blossom-scented, pine rose as a gift. We would always laugh uncontrollably until we cried tears of joy. One ~~cheer~~ day, I became worried about Kay, because he'd done something he would never do before. It all happened when a icy, sparkly sleigh zoomed past us rapidly and approached into the village. The driver inside it stood still. Although it was a smart looking sleigh, I had a feeling that something just wasn't right. I'd never seen anything like it ever. I looked at the driver. I could see a tall, blue lady with a big, wooly hat. As the wind blew wildly, Kay suddenly had a terrible pain in his chest. I felt sorry for him and started to shed tears. Suddenly, he started shouting at me. It was very confusing ~~too~~ because we had been best friends ever since. Even though we were friends, he was still rude to me. Then Kay left me all alone.
